

Erasmus's considerations.

The project represented an important opportunity for personal development and growth because we experimented with different organization and teaching models.

The first mobility destination was in Skopje where at the end we learned to share different traditions and culture. The second stage of the project took place in Italy through a busy program including visiting some First World War sites, in Sicily.

The third and last destination of this wonderful project was Lier, in Belgium.

A unique experience full of sharing and inclusive moments, whereby it was possible to imagine different future scenarios.

In the host schools we breathed a serene atmosphere and great harmony between students and teachers. From the first moment we received a wonderful welcome from everyone, both teachers and students.

Also there was enough time for funny moments among the students outside the school context, in full autonomy, freedom and self-management.
